Funeral Pall

As outlined in a previous newsletter, the Funeral Pall is being introduced into our parish. This is a large white or cream cloth which is placed over the coffin as it lies before the altar. At our baptism, we were wrapped in a white garment or shawl to show that we had become a new creation in the waters of baptism. The pall reminds us of that baptism and that we are being renewed in the eyes of God as we embark on our last journey towards the Kingdom.

In preparation for this, the Extra-Ordinary Ministers of the Eucharist have been trained on how to fold and place the pall on the coffin and they will be there to assist families at funerals. When the coffin arrives before the sanctuary, the assistants will bring forward the pall and place it on the coffin. The family will then unroll the pall to cover the coffin, which has the Cross and the Christian symbols for Alpha and Omega – the beginning and the end – reminding us that the Lord is present at the beginning and end of our lives. At the end of the Funeral Mass and just before the Prayer of Commendation, the assistants will come forward and – after the family have removed the pall – will take the pall from the family.

The priest who will speak with the family in preparation for the funeral, will also speak with the family about this.

Vocations Weekend for Men Discerning the Catholic Priesthood

A vocations weekend will be held on Friday 17th and Saturday 18th February 2017 in the Pallotine House, Thurles, for all men between the ages of 18 to 40 who feel God might be calling them to priesthood. This is a gathering of men from the Munster dioceses, and it begins at 6pm on the Friday evening with dinner, followed by time for prayer and group discussions. On Saturday morning, there will be further discussions and testimonies from young priests, with Mass, Confessions, and lunch. There will be a final talk after lunch, before departure at 3pm.
